

Basal ganglia: Group of structures (mainly the caudate nucleus, putamen and globus pallidus) located in the central brain and primarily involved in the coordination of voluntary movements (e.g. drinking a glass of water), but also in the control of certain aspects of sight.

